

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A CFI-type zeolite where the atomic ratio of silicon to the heteroatom is 45 or less and the long axes of the crystals are 0.7  $\mu\text{m}$  or less is useful as a catalyst for conversion reaction of aromatic compounds because the zeolite has a number of active sites and small crystals.